FOREST CITY FLASHES.

Notes of General Interest from Susque hanna's Exterprising Town.

FOREST CITY, Pa., April 17 -Rev. J. C Hogan's friends will be pleased to learn that he will be the paster of the Methodist Episcopal church in this place for another year. This will be his third year in this place, and the church has grown strong numerically, as well as financially, under his paster ate. A new parsonage worth $2,000, ndsomest residences in town is simest completed, and nearly all the money is raised. Mr. Hogan has gained a wide reputation abroad as being a champion advocate of tem perance, and Forest City people in general, are pleased to welcome the return of Rev. J. C. Hogan.

Charley Leonard was the happy possessor of a large catch of speckled beauties which he was displaying to friends last evening. Charley says it took about three hours to catch them. but some of his best friends said he bought them from an expert fisherman who went fishing yesterday.

Joseph C. Lappeus, after a short vacation at his home in this borough, returned to his school duties at Keystone Academy yesterday.

Blancae May, daughter of L. V. and dillie Arnold, died Sunday afternoon, aged 3 years 10 months and 9 days, scarlet fever. The funeral was held this morning, being private on account of the fatality of the disease. Interment was at Clifford, Rev. D. P. Lappens officiating.

The Woman's Christian Temperance nion will hold a parlor meeting at Mrs. J. D. Caryl's tomorrow afternoon. Elijah Carpenter, of Uniondale, was looking after his business interests in this place today.

Worrying a Big Bailroud. There is a story attached to the condem nation proceedings instituted by the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad company which Bridget Burns received $16,000 for 23% feet frontage on Kinzie street, near Canal. Her husband was known as "Micky" Burns to all the river men, ships' crews and stevedores in the port of Chi-cago. "Micky's" junk shop was a favorite place, and had a reputation that reached to every port on the inland lakes. He bought some land on the river near Kinzie and Canal streets. The Northwestern road laid its tracks over the river to its depot on the north side, and it happened that they extended four inches on 'Micky's' land. There was talk of condemnation, but as the house was not in the way they were unsuccessful.

Then the fun began. About four times ayear the railroad company got bills of damages from "Micky" for the plaster that was regularly shaken off his ceilings by the passing of the trains. They were con temperously rejected, and the owner finally started to retaliste. He painted his house occasionally, and when he did so or wanted to drive a nail over a second story window be waited until it was time for trainsto pass when he carefully placed the foot-of his ladder over one of the tracks, just within his own property, and crawled up the rounds. The train came, but the engineer did not dare to knock "Micky" down, as be knew the man had a perfect right to do what he pleased on his own premises. So "Micky" sat there for hours, harmering away or swiping a clapboard with a paint brush. No entreaties would bring him down, and the whole system of the Chiengo and Northwestern was blocked. Several times he climbed upon the ridgepole of his house with a shotgun, and threatened to shoot the first-engineer that drove an engine over his ground. It took a good share of Chicago's police force in those days to get him

A few years ago "Micky" died, and his widow, Bridget, did not keep up the hostilities, and at last was compelled to sell her house. But she got a good price for it.
